It sounds like we’ve got a lot of work to do. Now, I’m going to turn it over to my colleague, Sarah Miller, to give us closing remarks and just parenthetically Sarah herself is a Generation X woman. Sarah?

Thank you, Jane. On behalf of the Women’s Bureau, I would like to thank our presenters for sharing their time and expertise on today’s call. You have encouraged us to think about how we can increase our earnings and achieve our financial goals. I would also like to thank our listeners for joining the call. I hope that what you learned today will motivate you to continue taking steps to prepare for your financial security.

The Department of Labor provides several resources that may help you develop your career plan and reach your earning potential. One is the Occupational Outlook Handbook, which is available online at www.bls.gov/oco. This handbook is a nationally recognized source of career information. It contains descriptions of occupations, including the training and education needed to pursue them, earnings, and expected job prospects.
Another resource is the Occupational Information Network, or O*NET OnLine. It’s a database that can be used to search for occupations that match your skills, interests, and experience. Its Web address is http://online.onetcenter.org.

A third online resource that has specific guidance for career changers is Career Voyages, www.careervoyages.gov. It provides information on high-growth, high-demand occupations along with the skills and education needed to attain those jobs. It features industries such as biotechnology, construction, energy, financial services, healthcare, and information technology.

As you can see, there is a wealth of career resources available, and I hope you will take time to explore them. This concludes our call for today. Please join us for our next WiSe Up teleconference call, which will be on Friday, April 29th at 12:00 P.M. Eastern time.

The topic for the call is taxes. To listen to recordings of the previous calls, please visit the Wi$e Up Web site, www.wiseupwomen.org. For anyone in the audience who is not familiar with the Web site, you may also access the Wi$e Up curriculum there to learn more about managing your money.

Thank you again for participating today.

J. Walstedt

Thank you.
