On behalf of the Women’s Bureau, I’d like to thank our presenters, Sarah Holt, Eric Nordman, and Rebecca Pace, for sharing their expertise on insurance today.

We’d also like to thank our mentors and our Wi$e Up participants for being on the call.

As we’ve learned, insurance is a key part of our overall financial plan. When was the last time you reviewed your insurance policies? As your life changes, your insurance needs change too. It is recommended that you review your policies annually to make sure that they continue to meet your needs.

Insurance policies are legal contracts that may be loaded with technical terms that are hard to understand. The Insurance Information Institute has a glossary of insurance terms available at www.iii.org/ to help clarify any unfamiliar terms you may come across in your policies.

As Jane mentioned in her opening remarks, September is Life Insurance Awareness Month. The nonprofit Life and Health Insurance Foundation for Education is coordinating a campaign to remind you to give yourself an insurance checkup. The foundation provided information on life, health, disability, and long-term care insurance on its Web site www.life-line.org.

For example, you can find answers to questions such as
Who needs life insurance?
What are the different types available?
How much should you buy? and
Where can you buy life insurance?

Also, on the Web site you can find life insurance and disability insurance need calculators.

This concludes our call for today. To listen to recordings or read transcripts of previous Wi$e Up teleconference calls, including an earlier call on “Insurance: Protecting Yourself Against Financial Loss,” please visit the Wi$e Up Web site at www.wiseupwomen.org.

Please join us on our next Wi$e Up teleconference call on “Financial Planning for Life Events” on October 31 from 2 pm to 3 pm Eastern Standard Time. Again, thank you all for participating.

Jane Walstedt: Thank you.
